LONDON, May 25, 5 a. m.—A special from Rome to the Morning Standard says that the Pope is seriously ill.

MAUCH CHUNG, May 25.—Heavy rains during the past eight hours, have completely quenched the flames in the lumber region in all parts of this county.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Times says that all the stock jobbing operations on one side or the other cannot save the Erie railway from passing into the hands of a receiver. The exposures of two years ago clearly foreshadowed that result.

ST. LOUIS, May 25.—The striking coal shovellers of the Vulcan Iron Works did not make the attack on the new hands in their places to-day. The number of the strikers is twenty-two.

The 25 annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal church opened this morning.

ELECTRIC FLASHES.

A large number of the mule spinners at Lowell, Mass., have returned to work and signed an agreement to remain outside of the Union, any breach of the contract to be considered sufficient cause for immediate dismissal.

The Black Hills surveying party to Laramie Monday, and numerous mining parties are waiting in the vicinity of the Platte for the departure of the troops.

The young Cheyennes and dissatisfied Sioux are disposed to make trouble with the surveyors in the Black Hills, and have been holding councils looking to that end.

The miners in the Lehigh region are reported tired of the long strike and going to work on the reduction of 1874.

Disraeli said Monday that a satisfactory reply had been received from Germany in relation to England's representatives respecting France and Germany, but that it "would not be to the public convenience to lay a copy of the correspondence before the House."

The rectifying houses of Howe & Habbell and Armon & Co., Cincinnati were seized Monday.

Incendiaries started a big blaze in the lumber yards at Minneapolis, Minn., Sunday night, causing a loss of $66,000. Games, Cook & Co. and Robinson & Co. were the principal losers.

NEW YORK, May 26.—Gold, 1.16 1-4. Specie shipments to Europe, $168,568. Jewett, president of the Erie railroad, was appointed receiver of the company by the supreme court this morning.

The steamship Great Western which sailed yesterday for Bristol, England, has returned with her machinery out of order.

A committee of the North Pacific Railroad bond holders have agreed upon a plan of making something out of the property of the road, to-wit: Its purchase—the stock to be converted into the lands of the company.

THE HORSE DISEASE.

has broken out with great violence at Mastenson's stables, corner 14th and Poplin.

HORRIBLE.

The report that a terrible crime was perpetrated last night, six miles out on the Skinker road reached the city at noon to-day. It is said that a negro went to a house in the vicinity designated, killed the man, ravished his wife, and then plundered the premises.

LONDON, MAY 25.—Wm. Smith, an American seaman, one of the mutineers on the schooner Jefferson Borden, said on examination to-day that the captain frequently ill-treated the crew. The food was bad and insufficient and they were often required to work from 36 to 46 hours on a stretch. Owing to his illness further hearing was adjourned for two weeks when it is expected the other prisoners will be in attendance.

MEMORIAL DAY.

An Extraordinary Display at Memphis—Fraternal Intermingling of Northern and Southern ex-Soldiers—Business Entirely Suspended.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 24.—The memorial ceremonies to-day were the grandest ever witnessed in the South. Despite threatening weather, at an early hour the streets were filled with people bearing flowers wherewith to deck the graves. Business was almost entirely suspended, while from numerous buildings National and Confederate flags were hung out, which, with the brilliant uniforms of the State Guards, gave to the city a holiday appearance. At noon the procession was formed at the corner of Main and Exchange, and moved down Main in the following order: Chief Marshal General Colton Greco and aids; music; Chickasaw Guards, Company A; Irish Volunteers; Templars Guards; orators of the day in a carriage; soldiers of Mexican and Florida war; Invincible Fire Company, carrying General Forrest's battle-flag and the battle-flag of the 3d Tennessee Federal Cavalry; ex-Confederates on foot; ex-Federals in carriages; ex-Confederate horses; music; Liberator Mutual Relief Society; Irish Literary Society; Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society; Societe Francaise, Societe de Unione; Etratteianza Italiana; music; German Benevolent Society; Germany Casino Deutscher Bruder Band; Memphis Mannerchor; music; city schools, first division; music; city schools, second division, in carriages; Mayor and General Council; Army and navy of the Union; ex-Federal officers and soldiers; St. Andrew's Society; Gracette Berlin; citizens. The procession was over a mile in length, and as it passed through the principal streets, which were crowded with people, bearing flowers, they gave vent to their feelings as objects of special interest were seen. At the head of the mounted ex-Confederates rode General Forrest and the surviving members of his staff, while the Mexican veterans were led by General Gideon J. Pillow. In one carriage were two large flags, Federal and Confederate, made entirely of flowers. The latter was partly furled, and the national flag flung to the breeze. The number of ex-Federals participating in the procession was about 100, representing nearly every State in the Union, among whom were Lieutenant Colonel George Gibson, United States Army; Colonel J. W. Jefferson, who served throughout the war in the 8th Wisconsin, or Live Eagle, Regiment, and now a prominent cotton merchant, and who, like most of the ex-Federals participating, has never taken part in any public demonstration before; Colonel Harry F. Tomlinson, formerly Adjutant-General on the staffs of Generals Curtis and Schofield; Captain N. D. Menkin, formerly of General Rosecrans' staff, a leading dry goods merchant; Captain F. B. Edgington, 12th Iowa, a prominent lawyer; Hon. Hosea Townsend, Lieutenant 2d Ohio, a prominent lawyer; Major James O. Pierce, Assistant Inspector General on General Washburn's staff, one of the orators of the day; Captain Nat Lowe, of General Butler's staff; Captain Alf. G. Tuther, of Gen. Buckland's staff; Major S. B. Harrigan, U. S. Volunteers, and many others who occupy prominent positions in the city. After traversing the principal streets, the procession took the Memphis and Charleston train for Elmwood Cemetery, where a grand stand had been erected for the occasion, and on arriving there the following order of exercises was observed:

Prayer—By Rev. Dr. Staiback.
Hymn—"Rock of Ages," by Mendelssohn Quartette Club.
Poem—"The Blue and Gray," Master Lee Merriweather.
Grave Song—Memphis Mannerchor.
Oration—Luke E. Wright, Esq.
Hymn—"Nearer My God, to Thee," Mendelssohn Quartette Club.
Oration—Judge James O. Pierce, late of the Federal army.
Night Song of the Warriors—Memphis Mannerchor.
Poem—Composed by Dr. Granger, U. S. A.
Hymn—"Old Hundred," Mendelssohn Quartette Club.

Benediction by Rev. Jas. Carmichael. The orations were in keeping with the spirit of the occasion, and everything passed off well, and the general impression prevails that nothing since the war has occurred to so completely break down the barriers between the North and South, and unite our whole people. Only one accident occurred to mar the celebration, and this was caused by Gen. Colton Greene's (the Chief Marshal) horse falling upon him, on his return to the city this evening, and breaking his left leg just above the ankle.

AMERICAN APPLES IN ENGLAND.—Nothing astonishes the English more than our system of barreling apples. In that country the crop is placed thinly on shelves, in fruit houses constructed especially for the purpose, and no one thinks of sending them long distances to market. Our Rhode Island Greenings and Baldwins, therefore, which now go there in barrels in immense quantities, surprise them considerably. A good deal of this is, perhaps, due to the varieties we send there. A few years ago the Newton Pippin was the great American apple in the London market; but since the failure of that variety, those two named have in a measure taken its place. It is not, however, that these apples should reach the English markets in such excellent condition after being merely barreled up that astound the English; the price is also a wonder, for after being sent so far, they can still be sold at a price the English can hardly touch with their own fruit. This speaks well for the progress of American fruit culture.—Philadelphia Press.

THE JEFFERSON BORDEN MUTINY.

The History of the Trouble—A Desperate Fight in Mid-Sea.

[From the N. Y. World.]

The three-masted schooner Jefferson Borden left Boston for England about March, manned as follows: Captain, William Patterson; first mate, his brother, Corydon T. Patterson, single, thirty; second mate, his cousin, Charles H. Patterson, single, twenty-six; crew, Henry Aken, cook; Jacob Lumber, George Miller, thirty-eight, Russian; William Smith, twenty-three, American; Clew, twenty, English; Henry Mallhiende, boy. The Captain's wife was on board. About the 15th of March Captain Patterson put Miller in irons for disobedience and an attempt to intimidate the officers by saying that he carried a revolver and asking if the ship was insured. An apology, signed by Miller, was entered on the log March 15, and matters, despite the occasional grumbling to be expected on a rough voyage, went pleasantly till midnight on the 20th of April, when the schooner was about latitude 28 deg. W., longitude 48 deg. N., or from 1,000 to 1,200 miles from England. Lumber was at the helm and the second mate on watch. Smith struck the mate on the head with a capstan bar, and he rolled or—more probably, since the bulwark are high—fell into the sea. Smith then called to the first mate that it was eight bells and his watch on deck, and when he left the cabin Miller felled the unfortunate man with a huge iron bolt. Then he, Smith and Clew threw the body into the water. Shortly after 1 o'clock Miller awakened the Captain by knocking at his cabin-door and saying that a man in the fore-castle had broken his leg. Coming out the Captain saw that Miller had one hand behind his back and that his appearance did not betoken peace. "Who's hurt?" he asked. "I don't know," said Miller, "but come up." "Where are the mates?" was then asked, but no answer was returned, and Mrs. Patterson called to her husband, "Don't go, Will." Arming himself with a revolver the captain induced the cook to go to the deck-house, where he saw Miller and Smith. He asked where the mates were, but got no answer except, "Come up to the fore-castle and see the man." "I ain't going; you don't fool me," he replied and returned to the cabin, which was shortly after assaulted by the men with showers of bottles and bolts, and pieces of grindstone and cast-iron. The captain fired on the mutineers and drove them into the deck-house, a structure about ten feet square in the center of the upper deck and on a level with the officers' cabin in the stern. About this was the helm, where Lumber, the Sweed, remained unmolested during the fight. The boy was gagged and tied and dropped into the lower hold of the fore-castle, whence he escaped during the night and crawled to a hiding-place in the captain's part of the ship.

The captain and the steward, having secured their arms, three six-shooters and a double-barrelled gun, held a consultation, expecting a renewed attack. At day-break, when calm weather was experienced for the first time since leaving Boston, the captain went cautiously forward to the deck-house and, finding the three mutineers dozing, proceeded to nail up the door. The men offered no opposition, but declared they would not yield up their submission to the captain. The captain repeatedly informed them that if they did not immediately surrender and allow themselves to be put in irons he would fire upon them. At length the terrible expedient was resorted to of his discharging the revolvers at the men.

Shot after shot was fired in from the window and from a hole in another part of the deck-house, and still the men stated they would never yield. They held through the whole of the 21st, although they had all received wounds. On the morning of the 22d, when thirty-six hours had passed since the outbreak of the mutiny, Miller, who had by this time received five bullet wounds in one leg, cried out from the floor, upon which he had fallen in great agony, "I am willing to give up, sir."

The mutineers were then ironed with heavy chains secured by padlocks. Miller had five wounds in the right leg, one in the side and one in the shoulder. Clew was shot twice in the left side and Smith in the right wrist, with scratches in the left shoulder and left hand. During the time that the insubordinates held out the ship was at the mercy of the wind and waves. Later the captain, the cook, the Sweed and the boy arranged a system of managing the vessel, which in a way answered, but fearful labor entailed upon each individual during a crisis lasting nearly seven days. The wife of the captain constantly took her husband's watch on deck, in order to permit him to obtain a little sleep. On the 28th a Norwegian barque encountered the schooner and gave her one man; the vessel reached the Nore on the 16th of May.

The mutineers declare that their only object was revenge for harsh treatment, but the theory more generally received is that they intended to plunder the vessel, Captain Patterson, who has been at sea for twenty-four years, being thought to be a wealthy man.

HOUSEHOLD WORDS.—Stop your noise! Shut up, this minute! I'll box your ears! Hold your tongue! Get out! Behave yourself! I won't! You shall! Never mind! You'll catch it! Put away those things! You'll kill yourself! Mind your own business! I'll tell you! You mean thing! There I told you so! I did! I will have it! Oh, look what you have done! Twas you! Won't you catch it, though! It's my house! Who's afraid of you? Get out of this room, directly! Do you hear me? Dear me, I never did such a thing in all my born days.—Church Union.

TRUSTEE'S SALE!

WHEREAS, JOHN ADAM RANK AND Gertrude Rank, his wife, of the county of Cole, State of Missouri, by their certain Deed of Trust dated the eighth day of July, 1870, and recorded in the Recorder's office of Cole county, at Deed Book X, pages 121, 122 and 123, conveyed to the undersigned, Henry Burger, as Trustee, all their right, title, interest and estate, in and to the following described real estate situated in the county of Cole, State of Missouri, viz:

Part of in-lot four hundred and seventy-eight (478), in the City of Jefferson, and located as follows: Beginning on High street at a point on said lot twenty-five feet east from the west side of said lot, and adjoining the lot of F. H. Friese; thence running east along High Street twenty-five feet; thence at right angles one hundred and ninety-eight feet and eight inches to the alley; thence west along said alley twenty-five feet to the lot of F. H. Friese; thence north along the line between said lots 198 feet 8 inches to the beginning, being same property deeded by John H. Edwards and wife to John Seidel; which said conveyance was made in trust to secure the payment of a certain promissory note and interest in said deed described, and whereas the interest on said note has long since become due and remains unpaid, now therefore, in accordance with the provisions of said Deed of Trust, and at the request of the legal holder of said note, I will proceed to sell the above described real estate at the Court House door in the City of Jefferson, in the county of Cole, State aforesaid, to the highest bidder for cash, at public auction, on Wednesday, the 23d day of June, 1875, between the hours of nine in the forenoon and five in the afternoon of that day, to satisfy said note with interest, together with the cost and expense of executing this trust.
